Daughter of the Sun is a historical novel by Jewel Castel about Nefertari, the beloved wife of Ramses the Great. The novel follows Nefertari's life from her childhood in the Nile Delta to her rise to power as the most powerful woman in Egypt.

Plot

Daughter of the Sun begins with Nefertari as a young girl. She is the daughter of a minor nobleman, and her life is simple and carefree. However, when her father is killed in battle, Nefertari is forced to flee her home with her mother and sister.

The three of them travel to Thebes, where Nefertari's uncle is a high-ranking official in Pharaoh Ramses II's court. Nefertari's uncle takes them in, and Nefertari quickly becomes a favorite of the Pharaoh.

As she grows older, Nefertari's beauty and intelligence attract the attention of Ramses. He takes her as his wife, and she soon becomes his most trusted advisor. Nefertari uses her power to help the people of Egypt, and she becomes known as a great queen.
