The Contents Of The Collection

The collection is divided into three parts. The first part contains poems from the Middle Ages. These poems are typically anonymous, and they deal with a variety of subjects, such as love, loss, and war. The second part of the collection contains poems from the Renaissance. These poems are more polished and sophisticated than the poems in the first part, and they often deal with more complex themes, such as religion, philosophy, and politics. The third part of the collection contains poems from the later Renaissance and the early modern period. These poems are more influenced by classical literature, and they often display a greater degree of wit and satire.
